letter

from the publisher

What a milestone! Chicago-Scene.com is 10 years old and SCENE Magazine is 7. During these years, we have come a long way. In the beginning, I did everything every-day. The camera I started the website with cost $300, had no flash and could only store 40 post-card-size photos in its internal memory. Technology has since improved and helped my growing staff compose the magazine each month.

There are a number of people responsible for SCENE's success. Without the help of my two brothers Ron and Rick, I could have never gotten the website off the ground. I would like to thank my first employee, my wife Corey, who helped me hand out cards at summer festivals. Many thanks should also go to Katie Piccirillo our fine editor, David Anthony, one of the most talented fashion photographers in the country, and Scout, our creative director, who never fails to stay after hours to ensure the magazine is visually appealing. Our staff is composed of the city's most highly qualified writers, designers and photographers and I thank them all. Lastly, I have to thank our readers for being so devoted and dedicated to SCENE.

Enjoy the mag,

Ted Widen
